NURTURING THE PEER VOICE

Resilience Collective Annual Report

For the Financial Year ended 31 March 2021

Our Heartfelt Thanks

The Board and team at Resilience Collective would like to extend our heartfelt gratitude and appreciation to the Agency for Integrated Care and National Council of Social Service for their continued support towards our initiatives and programmes.

We would like to acknowledge our donors, partners, friends and volunteers for their dedication and commitment to the value of the lived experience.

Most of all, we would like to thank our peers for their acts of courage, tireless efforts and passion for our cause. Your voices of resilience and empowerment will continue to inspire and empower all in the community.

#PowerofWE

resilience

Resilience Collective (RC) is powered by peers, for peers. We nurture the voices of persons with a lived mental health experience, or peers, and together, draw on the first-hand knowledge of the lived experience to support mental health recovery, promote help-seeking behaviour, build inclusivity and remove the damaging mentality of "us and them".

Our core initiatives include:

- 1. Resilience Education which equips peers with strategies and coping mechanisms for sustained recovery.
- 2. Peer Support Programmes such as Virtual Coffee and Circle of WE, which see peers supporting each other as they progress along their recovery journeys.
- 3. Peer Empowerment Outreach such as PhotoStory and human libraries where peers use their voices to engage, as a form of self-empowerment and to inspire hope in recovery. Our outreach efforts also aim to raise literacy that mental health needs the active participation of an inclusive society.

Initiatives and programme content at RC are co-produced by peers and other community stakeholders as equal partners, ensuring that shared knowledge, perspectives, and wisdom are harnessed for a holistic approach in mental health.

RC is an Institute of Public Character (IPC) and a member organisation of NCSS. We were founded in 2018 by BinjaiTree, Caregivers Alliance and Ms Chan Chia Lin.

Message from the Board

In late 2019, we first heard news of the Covid-19 outbreak. Close to two years on, we are still grappling with the uncertainties and widespread stress caused by the pandemic.

These have surfaced the importance of mental health to the forefront, giving rise to greater attention on this in Singapore. The government, social service agencies, community groups, and corporates have come up with a profusion of mental health initiatives in response. These initiatives clearly take into account the social dimension of care.

This is a very important step as mental health needs to not only consider the clinical aspect in the continuum of care, but be balanced with "social prescribing", namely care from greater social care, support and solutions. Collaboration across the full spectrum of professionals, caregivers, peers and social service partners needs to be fostered to better support recovery and act as safety nets to prevent mental health from worsening.

As a Board, we believe in dedicated and specialised support services such as peer and community support for impactful, holistic and sustained mental health recovery. In this regard, Resilience Collective (RC) was established in 2018. RC is a young charity. But the impact it has made in the past year has been meaningful. Against many challenges, RC made strides that brought the voices of peers, or persons with the lived experience of mental health conditions to the forefront. Through initiatives such as PhotoStory and human libraries, empowered peer voices which resonate with the community spoke to the value of the lived experience and the resilience built through peer support recovery.

It is our hope that RC continues to make sustainable impact in creating an inclusive society with a shared belief in the value of peer support, and where peers build resilience, not only in themselves, but in others. We are and continue to be inspired by what we see.

Message from Executive Director

It would be an understatement to say that it has been a challenging year. In so many ways, and at so many different levels. But the year has passed, and we are still here. Challenges were met face-on, and with resilience, Resilience Collective (RC) has emerged stronger.

As our work evolved through the year, it was evident that the role of peer support in recovery is not just important but crucial. A peer's lived experience is a key piece of the jigsaw in the complex world of mental health solutioning. Our role at RC is to enable the peer voice to be heard, more loudly, and through it, provide support to our peers and others at-risk.

The peer voice is fundamental in RC's recovery-based workshops. This programme provides not just a transfer of information, but the sharing of practical and first-hand applied knowledge. Group peer support sessions — Circle of WE and Virtual Coffee — were timely additions to our programmes, initiated by the RC peer community. Co-produced by peers, for peers.

Following on the success of previous year's human libraries, RC rolled out fresh iterations, expanding its library of human books and developing depth in the topics covered. The National University of Singapore edition was especially impactful as students stepped up to participate as human books. Truly peers speaking to their peers.

The power of safe and open conversations catalysed "How to Communicate with Us", a panel-style dialogue to foster a deeper understanding of mental health issues and what forms supportive communications with peers. It was particularly meaningful when peers engaged with the Achievers Club, a volunteer group at IMH, and then mental health professionals at Sengkang General Hospital. RC peers also engaged with the Public Transport Council, to highlight some challenges faced by peers when using public transport.

RC is very grateful for such partners who have been proactive in being inclusive and providing support to peers.

The icing on the cake was the exhibition PhotoStory: From Darkness to Light, a visual expression of peer experiences of recovery and resilience. The inaugural launch in January 2021 at Raffles City drew an overwhelming response of close to 1,200 visitors. The second showing in March 2021 at Plaza Singapura drew more to the exhibition. PhotoStory showed the commonality between the emotional difficulties faced by many of us, brought on by pandemic-related factors, and mental health issues. The difference lies in the depth and complexities of mental health issues, how they are more severe by multifold.

The past year's learnings will transition into exciting times of growth ahead. Programmes will expand to include resilience building and peer support initiatives, for youths and young adults. Plans are in place for curriculum to support youths, and separately, young adults in the workplace. A podcast series and a digital-based recovery roadmap resource are also in the works.

Peer stories will be reflected through all of these, because they are not just stories. They are testimonies of the strength and bravery of ordinary people, like you and me. With resilience they have learnt to cope with and manage their mental health challenges and today, contribute the knowledge of their lived experience to provide and hold the hope for others at-risk and in recovery.

We hope that you will continue this journey with us, as our peers are empowered to have their voices and perspectives heard, even louder.

Ms Goh Shuet-Li Executive Director

Co-Production

Co-production is core to the initiation and development of RC's programmes and initiatives. At RC, co-production is a strengths-based approach in which peers collaborate with professionals, experts and other stakeholders in an equal partnership, to harness the shared knowledge, perspectives and wisdom of all involved and co-create new approaches in the design, development and delivery of sustained mental health solutioning.

Co-production sessions held throughout the year saw direct engagement opportunities between peers, professionals and the community while contributing to the development of holistic initiatives and programmes.

During the year we also developed a Co-Production Toolkit which guides and supports the development of mental health co-production approaches within an organisation.

Over 189 direct engagements between peers and the community

62 co-production sessions held for 17 co-production projects

PEER STORY - CLEMENT

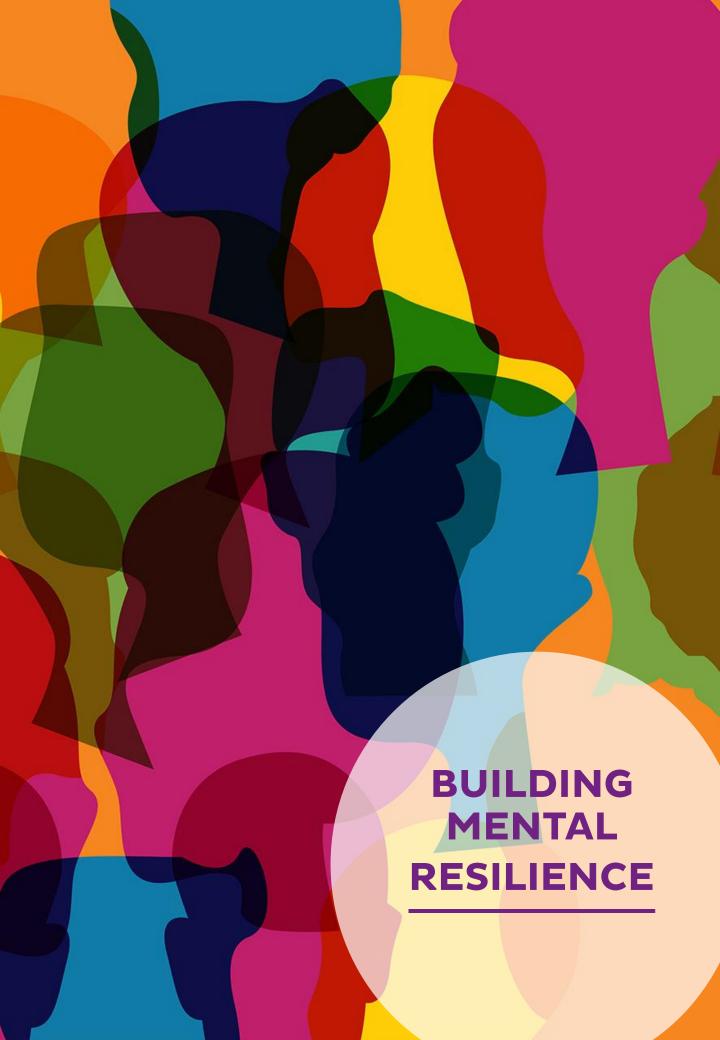

When I first heard about the work Resilience Collective did, I was instantly drawn to its core identity of being peer-driven and taking a creative ground-up approach to their initiatives.

It resonated with me as I have a lived experience with a mental health condition and was interested in making a difference in the mental health sector. Resilience Collective is a unique organisation that is receptive to the contributions and views of peers, while amplifying the peer voice.

Subsequently, I joined a co-production team to co-produce Resilience Collective's first peer support initiative — Circle of WE. It gave me the opportunity to contribute my lived expertise and creative ideas to develop peer support group sessions.

I am excited and passionate about being a community member and how RC has grown in such a short period. I am grateful for the opportunity to continue journeying with the peer community. It warms my heart to see many peers and stakeholders who are truly passionate about raising awareness of mental health and contributing to the cause.

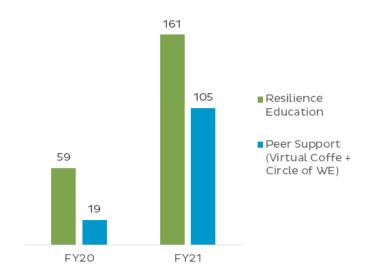

Even though we might have a different lived experience with a mental health condition, I believe that we remain united in the cause of wanting to make a kinder and inclusive world for all.

Programme Impact

RC is committed to empowering the peer voice through co-produced programmes and initiatives that promote sustained recovery, mental resilience and stand for the value of the lived experience.

Unique peer attendees of Resilience Education and Peer Support initiatives

Resilience Education

Resilience Education (RE) comprises seven co-produced workshops focused on sustained recovery and self-empowerment. RE will equip peers with coping mechanisms, nurture the peer voice and affirm the value of the lived mental health experience.

Resilience Education workshops are led by trained peer facilitators and certified peer support specialists from RC.

Resilience Education

Exploring Recovery

Embarking early into their recovery journeys, peers may ask themselves, where do I want to be in my recovery? Exploring Recovery encourages peers to take initial steps towards self-help through a variety of resources.

Managing Self-Stigma

Often, peers are stuck in a rut of disempowerment. Managing Self-Stigma introduces practical approaches and positive strategies to re-establish a kinder view of oneself and nurture self-confidence.

Managing Anxiety

As a peer's social circle widens, they are faced with a conundrum. Do I evade meeting new people or brave this new reality? Managing Anxiety explores strategies to manage anxiety in such experiences and more.

Wellness Planning

A mental wellness plan is a safety net for recovery. Wellness Planning introduces a clearer understanding of one's triggers and explores intervention strategies.

Resilience Education

Art of Friendship

In recovery, peers might struggle to grow and maintain relationships. Art of Friendship focuses on rapport building, boundary setting and conflict management, all towards building a supportive and healthy social network.

My Story, Our Journey

Being empowered means not letting your mental health define you and having the courage to tell your story. My Story, Our Journey helps peers champion the value of their lived experience and lend support to others during their recovery.

Coping with the Year-End Holidays

The year-end holidays are a time of celebration and gatherings. Coping with the Year-End Holidays helps peers manage emotions that arise during these times and provides steps to safeguard their mental wellness.

Camaraderie & acceptance through the group and hope by sharing my story

Articulating my emotions with fellow peers was cathartic and helped me cope better

Overcoming self-stigma is not easy but now I know I am not alone

I learnt to build sustainable friendships and how to be a friend to others

I find it helpful hearing people's experiences and the impact when peers come together

When I first experienced serious mental health challenges, I had suspected it to be depression, but my fears and doubts kept me in denial. Speaking openly about mental health seemed insurmountable because of a conservative family background and the prevailing culture of toxic masculinity, that I had hidden behind.

A turning point was when I revealed my mental health condition to a small group of fellow students. It was the first time I spoke up and received support. That was when I saw the power of sharing, and how we can support one another.

My Story, Our Journey was the first Resilience Collective workshop I attended, and I have not looked back since. I learned to confidently share on my recovery journey. As a human book, I have shared my lived experience of a mental health condition and encouraged peers to speak up and share practical solutions to help one another.

As a co-production member and facilitator for Resilience Education, I felt empowered as I could offer suggestions and create a positive impact in the recovery journeys of peers.

I endeavor to continue taking charge of my life while pursuing my aspiration to be a mental health professional. Today, I can say with absolute certainty that I am not only living but thriving in recovery.

Peers need a listening ear and at other times, to connect and gain insights from each other on how best to deal with reallife situations and emotions.

Virtual Coffee

A safe space where peers or persons-at-risk can openly share their thoughts and struggles while staying socially and emotionally connected.

Through Virtual Coffee, peers engage:

- On sustainable mental health coping mechanisms through shared personalised resources
- With a supportive community that accepts you for who you are

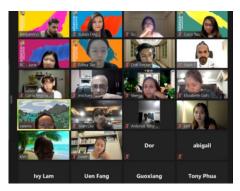

Circle Of WE

At Circle of WE, peers come together for ongoing peer support, and participate actively in discussions on real-life examples of applied skills and coping mechanisms for daily situations, mostly gained from Resilience Education workshops.

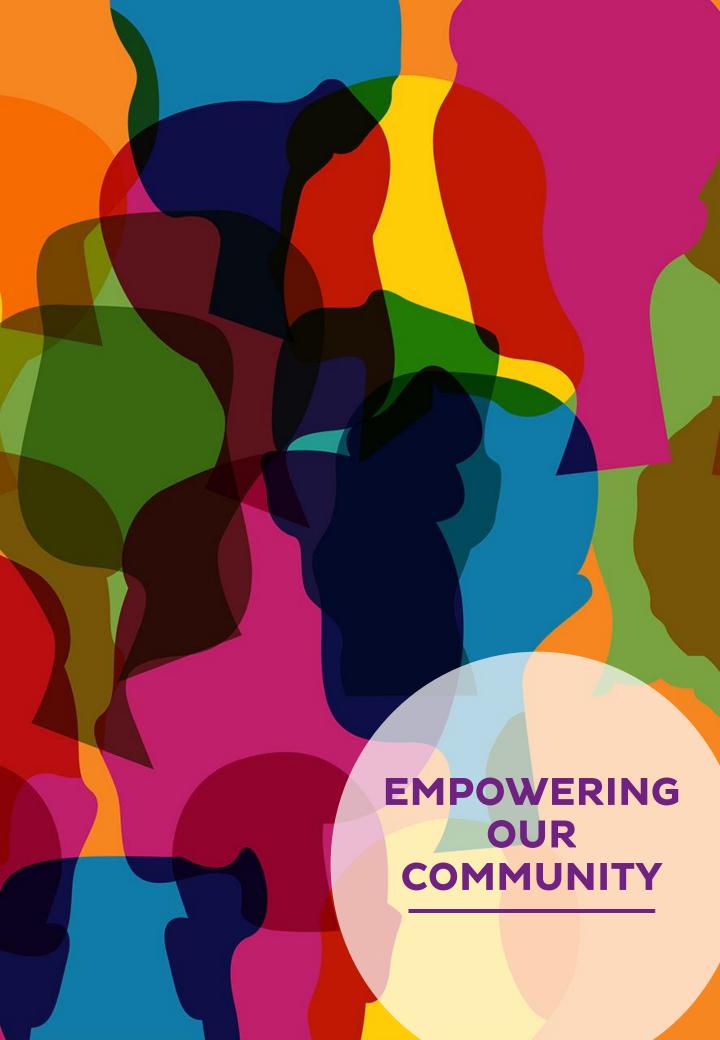

Through Circle of WE, peers would be supported by:

- Diving deep into mental health discussions led by peers, for peers
- Finding a community to foster accountability for persons in recovery
- Practising mental health coping strategies in a supportive environment

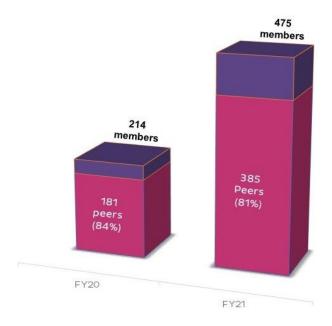

Community Impact

RC is committed to building and nurturing a community of empowered peers who speak to the value of the lived experience for holistic mental health recovery and resilience building.

PhotoStory

PhotoStory is one of Resilience Collective's signature peer empowerment initiatives which celebrates mental health recovery and resilience building.

PhotoStory sees peers participating in a series of hands-on workshops conducted by volunteer professional photographers. The workshops culminate in a visual exhibition of photographs taken by the peers and accompanying narratives that chronicle personal recovery journeys as expressions of the peer voice, while inspiring hope in mental health recovery.

The PhotoStory exhibition was launched on 27 January 2021 at Raffles City Shopping Centre by Guest-of-Honour, Speaker of Parliament, Tan Chuan Jin who actively engaged with the peer photographers to understand the inspirations and messages of hope behind their photographic works.

A second run of PhotoStory was held at Plaza Singapura for two weeks from 18 March 2021.

It was at the darkest point in my life where I chanced upon Resilience Collective.

PhotoStory: From Darkness to Light was a Resilience Collective initiative that I could strongly relate to. Volunteering for this event came at an opportune time. I met like-minded persons in recovery, and this helped me to better understand and cope with my mental health struggles.

The more time I spent with the people from this peer community, the more it grew into a safe space for me.

Participating in Resilience Education workshops expanded the coping resources needed to help me adopt personalised coping strategies. I also found confidence to participate in a Train-the-Trainer session where I could be more active in the role of peer support and facilitation.

Recovery is an ongoing journey and I see the opportunity to facilitate the workshops as an achievement. It is where I find comfort and hope that as peers, we are growing together as a community.

This experience has inspired me to apply for the Peer Support Specialist programme offered by the National Council of Social Services and I am confident that the programme will equip me with the practical skills to support other peers in recovery.

At least 1 in 5 youths experience a mental health condition, yet many suffer in silence and delay help-seeking. Resilience Collective is addressing this imperative through a two-pronged strategic approach.

The first strategic pillar sees the engagement of youths, their families and community in honest conversations on mental health. The second draws on the knowledge garnered from those conversations for the development of holistic peer-delivered programmes and peer support networks.

In the past year, engagement work was undertaken in Institutes of Higher Learning (IHLs) and tertiary institutions to gain deeper insights into the recovery needs of youth peers and the barriers to help-seeking.

Youth Conversations Without Stigma

Accendo

At this youth-focused mental health webinar, our youth peers shared their perspectives on mental health recovery and ways to forge mental resilience.

How To Communicate With Us @ NUS

Our peers provided insights at a panel discussion on how to better communicate with and support youth peers in recovery and break down barriers that prevent effective communication.

A Library Of Unspoken Stories - Youth-focused Themes

We brought our signature human library experience to two IHLs — National University of Singapore (NUS) and Nanyang Technological University (NTU). Almost 150 students benefited from the honest and up-close conversations with our Human Books, gaining deeper insights into support seeking for personal mental health and supporting peers who might be in distress.

The books were very honest and mature about their experience. It really demonstrated their level of self awareness on the road to recovery.

Sharing creates awareness of mental health in society. It should not be taken lightly or dismissed.

I like that I was in a space to share my story without judgement or fear.

It's a really good to put a face to mental health issues and know the real experiences of people and peers who are coping with it.

I felt very empowered by the experience, how as a survivor, I could help those going through it.

It's very meaningful and gave me a bigger exposure to mental health.

PEER STORY - TAS

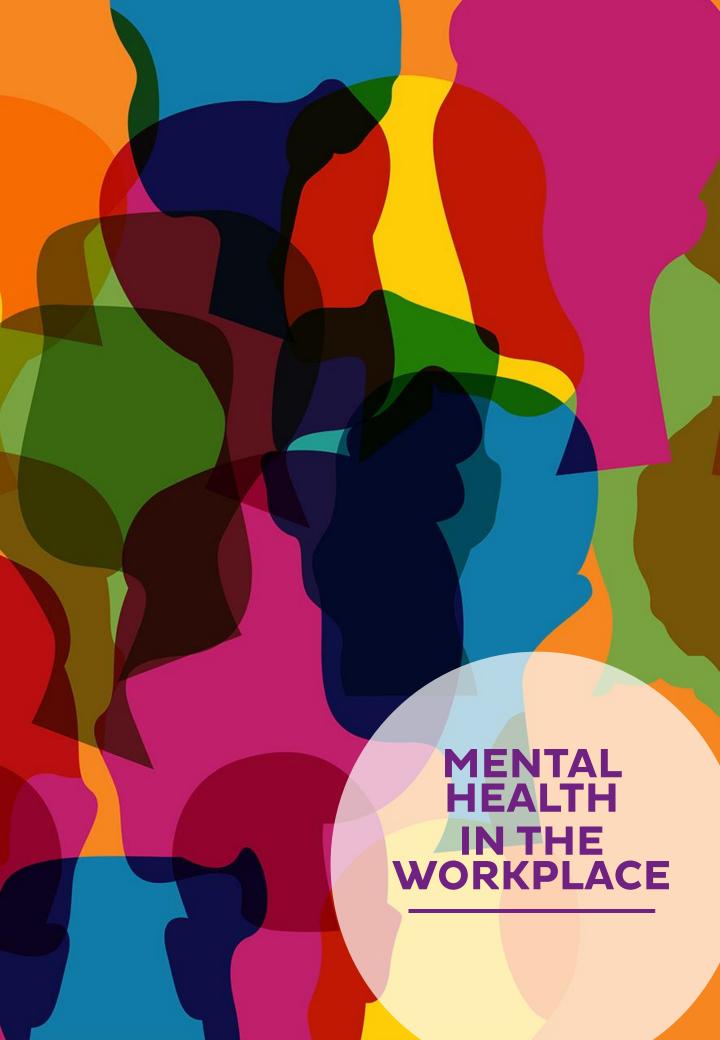

At a young age, I struggled with moments of anxiety, depression, and caregiver burnout.

Presenting my own story to the world was relatively new and a first for me. I participated in My Story, Our Journey under the Resilience Education workshop series, where I reflected and penned my story of recovery and resilience.

Another memorable event which I participated in was as a human book with Resilience Collective at A Library of Unspoken Stories in my university campus. I found it to be a truly exhilarating moment where I plucked up the courage to share my recovery story for the first time.

This was not easy, as given a couple of years back, I saw little happiness in my life. By sharing my recovery story, I aspire to empower peers in recovery to know that their mental condition is nothing to be ashamed of.

I am thankful for the outreach opportunities with Resilience Collective. They have encouraged me to step out of my comfort zone and spurred me to use the power of the peer voice as a catalyst for mental health awareness and solutioning.

Mental Health Matters in the Workplace

Positive mental health in the workplace benefits both employers and employees. A supportive and empathetic work culture translates into higher productivity in the longer term.

Resilience Collective's engagements bring the peer voice into the corporate space, as peers share openly about their lived experience as employees.

By raising awareness and bringing a better understanding of mental health issues into the workplace, organisations can be supportive of peers in the workplace, and help others stay healthy.

Corporate engagements include:

TAG Heuer - How to deal with a pandemic

Deutsche Bank – A safe space for conversations on mental health

Deutsche Bank – How to support someone who might need help?

Deutsche Bank – How do I know when my stress is no longer normal stress?

Deutsche Bank – Watercooler" sessions – group check-in sessions

Deutsche Bank – How to support someone who might need help? workplace mental health sharing with RC staff

PEER STORY - MIN HUI

On World Mental Health Day in 2019, Resilience Collective was wrapping up a talk at my workplace on An Insider's Guide to Mental Health and Self-Awareness. Inspired by the peer sharings, I also shared that I had a mental health condition.

This was the start of my involvement as a mental health champion at the workplace, and volunteering with Resilience Collective where I used my lived experience with a mental health condition to foster understanding and reduce mental health stigma.

I was really humbled by the opportunity to champion good mental health practices in the workplace. It is a cause close to my heart and was a call to start building a culture of empathy, kindness and encourage safe spaces for intentional mental health conversations.

My own recovery has always been fraught with fear and trauma. Even though my struggles are still present, by reaching out and being heard, I see the future as a celebration of life filled with richness and colours.

We uphold the belief that good governance is fundamental to our success. It enables and supports compliance with the law and relevant regulations. It also promotes a culture which ensures focus and clarity on fulfilling the vision and mission of Resilience Collective.

As at 31 March 2021, the Board of Resilience Collective comprised of 10 members. The Board met 3 times between 1 April 2020 and 31 March 2021 and will be meeting once more at the AGM to approve the publication of this Annual Report and Financial Statements.

The Board provides strategic direction and oversight of the Charity's programmes and objectives and oversees governance of the Charity. The Board is responsible for upholding the Charity's values and steers the charity towards fulfilling its vision and mission. The Board also guides and supports the Executive Director (ED) and approves annual budgets.
